AS A WOMAN SEES IT

By RHETA CHLIVE DORE.

Copyright, 1915, Evening Mail Syndicate, Inc.

A hundred years from now children studying United States history will learn of William Howard Taft that he was the president who organized a great and permanent good on his country by establishing a federal children's bureau, and placing at its head not a political appointee but a wise and good woman, Julia Lathrop. Perhaps the schools will celebrate Taft day in commemoration of an act that does not now to the average person seem very important.

Miss Lathrop has never had enough money for her children's bureau. She has had to work very hard to induce Congress to let her have as little as $55,000 a year. But she has made the money go as far as possible, and the researches which have so far been made have already produced results.

For one thing, the published reports of the children's bureau have made people see that the baby, instead of being a mere angel in a private family, is the community's most important responsibility. The reports have completely exploded the theory that, just as the Lord sends the babies, He also takes them back again according to His wisdom. Miss Lathrop has very clearly shown that the baby's chance of living longer than one year principally depends on the amount of wages its father is able to get.

This puts up the community the responsibility of saving the baby's life. We are plainly obliged to find means of increasing the earning capacity of future fathers. This means that we have got to take better care of all children, in school, in industry, in the streets, as well as in the home.

One state at least—Missouri—has started out in a systematic way to take care of its children and to bring them up to be strong, healthy, intelligent, self-sustaining citizens. A Children's Code Commission of twenty-seven members has recently been appointed by Governor Major to codify all the children's laws of the state and to draft needed new laws for their protection. The work is being done largely through the departments of law, sociology and political science of the state university, with the data and advice of the federal children's bureau as a general basis. In a year of hideous carnage how far this one little candle throws its beams.

ROUGH SEAPORT IS REALLY "DRY"

In Spite of Predictions That Its Location and Character Would Keep It "Wet."

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 24.—Vladivostok has been realized in spite of the predictions that a seaport which is the gateway to a rough frontier country could not be rendered alcoholic.

The imperial edict against alcohol has been so thoroughly enforced that but little liquor is sold. Punishment of bootleggers is so harsh that few men care to engage in the forbidden traffic, regardless of the immense profits it offers.

Vodka is the one drink which persons of all classes of society cherish in Siberia just as in European Russia. Before the czar's order against liquor vodka sold in Vladivostok at about fifty kopecks or twenty-five cents, about a pint. Harbin, which is located in Manchuria and consequently is under Chinese control, is the nearest place where liquor is now sold and the nearest place to Vladivostok. Liquor smuggled in from that point for secret sale in Vladivostok brings as much as five rubles, or about $2.50 gold a pint. This price is prohibitive for most men of the humbler classes. Yet a few of them manage to get liquor and an occasional drunken peasant is encountered staggering through the streets.

Better Persons Obedient. There seems to be little disposition on the part of persons higher in the social scale to evade the prohibition for alcoholic drinks in the restaurants and music halls. If the tip is heavy enough wine may be had in private dining rooms at some of the cafes. But the waiters must be sure of their customers and subject them to the third degree before producing beverage.

The difficulty and expense of getting liquor are so great that pleasure-loving Vladivostok has apparently decided to get along without it and the cafes chantants and music halls are making merry on ginger ale, coffee and Russian tea served with lemon. The charges for these drinks are quite as high as those for alcohol in ordinary times, so the spender who enjoys liquor chiefly because it is costly can still feel that his money is being kept in circulation.

"I haven't taken any liquor for three months," the manager of one of the important banks in Vladivostok remarked to the correspondent of the Associated Press. "I don't miss it now and would feel rather guilty if I drank in violation of the imperial order. Most of my friends feel the same way. The folks in the banking business have all seen the economic value of prohibition. It has jumped savings accounts up at a rapid rate."

When asked if the war order against alcohol would be made permanent the bank manager said he thought such action quite probable. "The women of Siberia are quite as keen to have permanent prohibition as the women of European Russia," he replied. "They are urging it in every way possible. It means more food and comforts for them and their children. Women talk to me nearly every day about it. They have money now in spite of the higher cost of living brought about by the war."

Once a Gay City. Before the war Vladivostok was one of the gayest places in Asia. Its cafes ran at full blast until 6 or 7 o'clock in the morning and diners seldom got under way before midnight. The miners, railway men, cattlemen and fur hunters from Eastern Siberia all centered at Vladivostok, and the sailors joined them in large numbers. But the war has brought many changes. Siberia has been drained of men of military age. Now the shipping has grown amazingly and there are seldom less than ten freight steamers in the harbor discharging war supplies. Consequently the floating population is large and the all-night revels would probably go on as usual were it not that liquor has vanished. The police require all places of amusement to close at 1 o'clock, and take wanderers in custody who are not properly accounted for at their lodgings by that time.

So the dinner hour in the Siberian Paris has been moved up to 10 o'clock and the orchestra and performers in the cafes chantants open their programs at that hour. The gayest of these cafes is now offering a revue something after the order of those produced in European capitals. Political jokes are the chief feature of the performance. One of the actors impersonates the Sultan and deplores at great length the fate into which he has been trapped by Germany. Another actor caricatures Emperor Francis Joseph, with very exaggerated whiskers, and is given a sound drubbing by a muscular young woman, dressed to represent Hungary, who charges the aged monarch with gross mismanagement of affairs. Two young women, representing Roumania and Greece appear with baskets labeled "neutrality" and endeavor to get a high bid for their baskets. The revue closes with a tableau in which Russia and her Allies are all represented by young women who stand triumphant actors representing downcast enemies.

Circus Crippled. Vladivostok also has a circus which has enjoyed a run of several months and is housed in permanent quarters. But the czar has claimed most of the strong men and the acrobats for his army. So the performers are now chiefly women and animals. A few male performers who are neutrals still have a place in the program, along with the trained dogs, cats, horses and parrots. Several clowns beyond the military age impersonate Germans and delight the audience with thrusts at the Kaiser.

The attendance at the circus is confined chiefly to the cheaper seats and standing space, where soldiers and sailors in uniform accompanied by their sweethearts, applaud the performance heartily.

Moving picture theaters are numerous in Vladivostok and very well attended. War pictures are especially popular. In one of these theaters the correspondent of the Associated Press saw a film purporting to show warships preparing to move against the Dardanelles from which the artist failed to blot out the Brooklyn bridge and the names of American battleships passing review.

Perfumes are being put up in pencil form, like the familiar headache pencils.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

LINGERIE

Waves from Clothes Line and Woman Complains to the Authorities.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 24.—Lingerie hung to the breeze, chemises dangling from the line and women's ruffled (censored), filled to buoyancy by the zephyrs, so preyed upon the mind of Mrs. A. Switzer Lewis, 615 Eleventh street, that she asked the police to prevent her neighbors from hanging their clothes over the sidewalk.

"Some folks living at Eleventh and G streets have a clothes line stretched from their upstairs porch to a tree at the edge of the curb," Mrs. Lewis told Police Sergeant George May on the phone. "On the line they hang all sorts of underwear and women's garter garments, according to Mrs. Lewis, much to the disturbance of her peace of mind and the detriment of the scenic beauty of the neighborhood."

"I was coming down the street a few days ago," said Mrs. Lewis, "and all these drawers, stockings, colored undergarments and petticoats were waving in the wind. The chemises and things had ruffles on them, and the way they waved about in the breeze was simply a fright. Two men were ahead of me and they were laughing themselves sick."
